

ROLE PROFILE - MID-LEVEL MOBILE DEVELOPER (ANDROID)

You've been an Android developer for a couple of years now, and you know how to build an app from scratch, as well as working on legacy code. You're passionate about learning more about IAM and you think that good UX can make the difference for the success of a product.

You will be joining a young and enthusiastic team, with an Agile approach to software development. Currently our products are written in Java, AngularJS, Android and Objective C, and our developers can work on either of these technologies. We believe in an approach where everyone can explore other languages or development tasks, as long as their main specialization allows it.

Overview of the Role

The person who fills this position could be found doing any one of the following at a given time:

- Collaborating with the rest of the development team to create information architecture, design sketches, wireframes and project quotes
- Participate in the team scrum meetings
- Contribute to native applications written in Android
- Define best practices around mobile development
- Take ownership on developing our products written for Android devices
- Review other people's code
- Design solutions

Must Know

- Experience in Android, Java and Android Studio
- Knowledge of software design patterns and architectural experience
- OO Design Patterns and SOLID concepts;
- APIs and Web Services
- Experience with data notation with XML, XML Schema, JSON;
- Full Project Lifecycle experience across different Methodologies (Agile/ Scrum, Test Driven Development, BDD).
